Jeannette Fitzsimons

The Impact of Green political parties under coalition government: Lessons from New Zealand.

A timely and thought provoking reflection on the opportunities and limits of Green Party impact in national policy debate under coalition governance arrangements.

Jeanette Fitzsimons served as New Zealand's Green party co-leader and a parliamentarian from 1992 until stepping down in February 2010. Ranked New Zealand's "most trusted politician", Jeanette Fitzsimons reflects on lessons from her experiences of 13 years of policy advocacy about sustainability under a variety of coalition governance arrangements.
